SOUTHERN CROSS NEARS GOAL CHINESE WAR LEADER RESIGNS

FOLLOWS STEP OF HIS CHIEF CHANG BY ACT

Peking Calmly Awaits New Developments in Civil War Situation

SHANGHAI, June 4.—Sun Chuan-fang, Chang Tso-Lin's principal ally in the Civil War, followed the example of his chief today and resigned command of the Shantung and Chihli armies.

Sun's decision to decamp in face of the Nationalist advance left only Chang Chung-Chung remaining of the three principal northern leaders, and Chang's army had been reported previously as routed and fleeing to safety.

Sun announced he would withdraw from his headquarters at Tientsin.

Foreign at Tientsin are occupying defensive positions bordering the foreign quarter. Many Chinese are seeking refuge in the quarter, depending upon the foreign troops—including American marines and infantry to guard them against looting troops of the Nationalist advance guard.

Japanese reports late today said that a large body of Nationalist troops was advancing on Tientsin and a small body was advancing toward Peking.

It was regarded as probable here that the army of Yen Shi-shan, "model governor" of Shan-si province, would be the first Nationalist force to arrive at Peking.

PEKING, China, June 4.—This northern capital today calmly awaited new developments of the Chinese civil situation—probably the peaceful occupancy of the city by southern Nationalist troops.

There have been few demonstrations since Chang Tso-Lin, dictator of affairs for the past five years, rode smilingly through the streets in an armored car yesterday and started his retreat back to Manchuria. He had left an interim government in charge and had made arrangements for gentlemen to maintain order.

Today there was quiet, although it was a quiet mixed with uneasiness as to what the next steps might be.

Generals Chang Hsue Hsiang and Yang Yu Tung, remaining of the northern forces that Chang Tso-Lin controlled, have decided to maintain their armies at a point 30 miles south of Peking. The onward driving Nationalist armies and the northern people.

THREE READY FOR AIR TRIP ACROSS OCEAN

Two Men And Famous American Woman Aviator To Make Perilous Hop

HALIFAX, N. S., June 4.—Miss Amelia Earhart of Boston, Leo Stultz and Lou Gordon took off at 8:30 p.m. est today for Trepassy Bay, Newfoundland, to start their trans-atlantic flight to England. Weather condition were excellent.

HALIFAX, N. S., June 4.—Three persons—including one of America's prominent women aviators—awaited today for favorable weather to start a challenge of the North Atlantic in a flight from Newfoundland to London.

Miss Amelia Earhart, Boston; Wilmer Stultz, at times pilot for Charles A. Levine and once pilot for Mrs. Frances Grayson, and Lew Gordon flew here yesterday from Boston in a big Fokker airplane they had purchased from Commander Richard E. Byrd. The plane is the one Byrd had intended using on his South Polar expedition this fall.

Without a previous announcement of plans the trio boarded the airplane at Boston yesterday, flew direct to Halifax and started making plans to fly on to Trepassy, 80 miles southwest of St. John's. From there the start to London will be made and it is probable they will fly to Trepassy today.

The trio are making the flight under the supervision of the mechanical science corporation of Delaware with George Palmer Putnam, the publisher, as director.

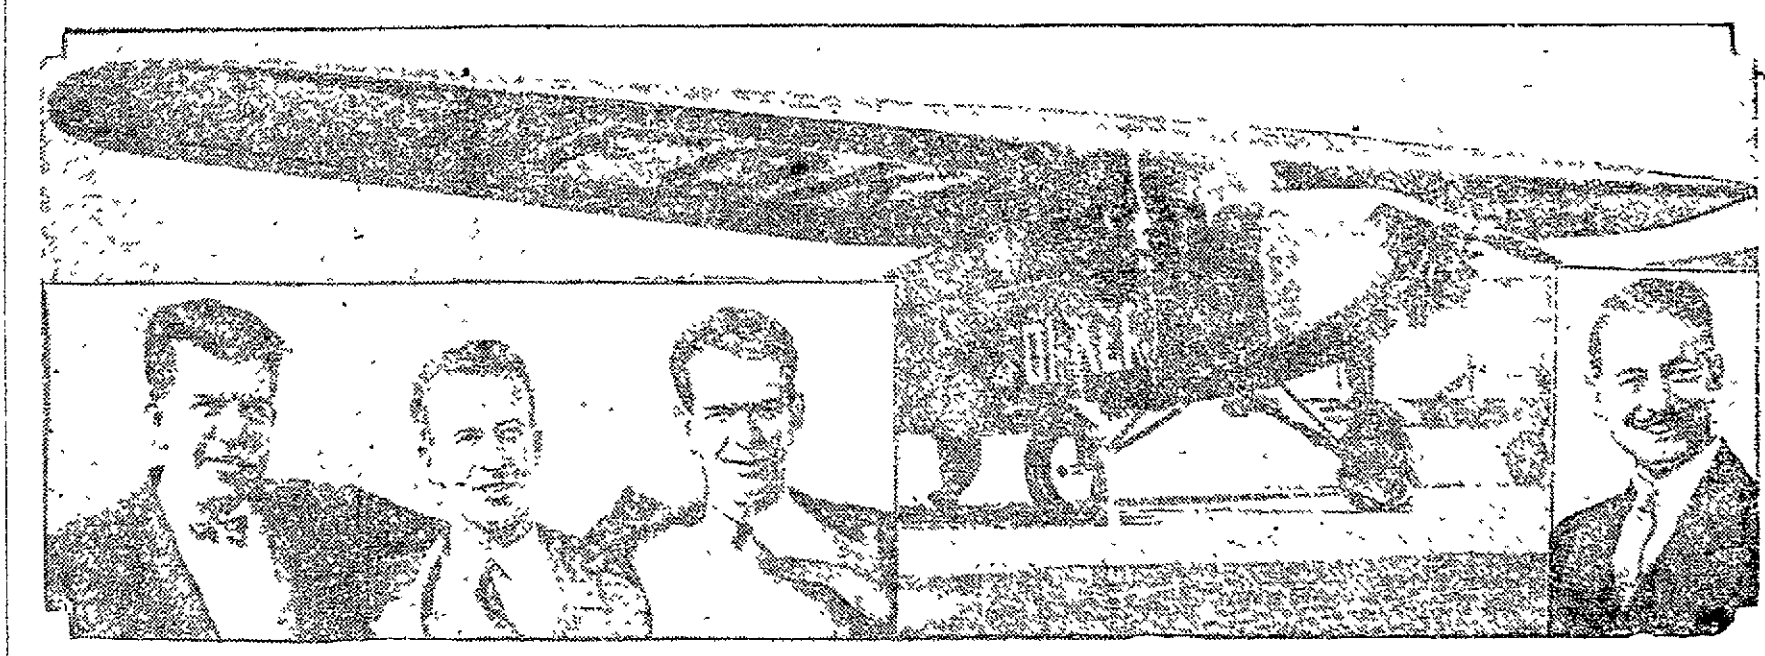

The Byrd plane is equipped with pontoons and it is understood the purpose of the flight is to further studies in the possibility of regular trans-Atlantic crossings.

The plane is so equipped that it may be able to land on the water should trouble develop while the over-seas flight is underway.

The harbor at Trepassy is excellent for a water-take off, it was said here. The harbor is wide and the water sufficiently calm so as not to spoil the taxiing.

When the Fokker machine arrives there it will be equipped with 1,000 gallons of gasoline and prepared for an immediate start. The fliers hope to land in the river Thames in London.

WINGING WAY ACROSS THE PACIFIC

This giant Fokker plane is carrying a crew of four men, two Australians, Captain Kingsford-Smith and Charles T. O. Ulm (first two left), and two Americans, Lieutenant Harry W. Lyans and James Warner (at right), on a hop from San Francisco to Australia. They completed the first leg to Honolulu in safety.

PLANE MAKING FINE TIME ON PACIFIC TRIP

Passes Over Phoenix Island Group And Radio That "All Is O. K."

TODAY IN THE AIR
Captain Charles Kingsford-Smith and his three companions in the Southern Cross were speeding across the Pacific from Hawaii to Suva, Fiji islands, making 90 knots an hour. They are due to arrive at 8 p.m. After a stop at Suva they will go on to Australia.

Miss Amelia Earhart, Boston social worker, and Wilmer Stultz held the tri-motored Fokker monoplane friendship in readiness for a flight from Halifax to London, with the start scheduled for this afternoon. They were forced down by fog after flying from Boston.

The ice-cutting ship Braganza was forcing its way to the north coast of Spitzbergen in the hope of reaching reindeer land and taking up the search for General Umberto Nobile and the missing dirigible Italia. An SOS picked up in Russia, said the Italia was in Franz Josef land. Lieut. Luetzow, Holm, Norwegian flier, prepared to start a search from Kings Bay in his naval seaplane.

Capt. Arrachart and Major Rignot, who attempted to set a long-distance flight record from Le Bourget Field, Paris, were forced down at Constantinople. India was their destination.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh flew for an unknown destination after landing at El Paso, Tex., from San Diego, Cal.

HONOLULU, June 4.—A faint message saying "All is well," was picked up from the trans-Pacific plane Southern Cross at 5:30 a.m. today, Honolulu time (8 a.m. Pacific coast standard time.) by the Mutual Wireless company. Other words were sent in the message, but the signals were weak.

The Southern Cross was so far from Honolulu that communication was becoming exceedingly difficult.

If the Southern Cross maintained its present speed, it would arrive in Suva at between 5 and 6 p.m. Pacific time, today.

HONOLULU, T. H., June 4.—Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith, and his three companions aboard the airplane Southern Cross passed over their first chance to land today while enroute from Honolulu to Suva in the Fiji islands—the longest over-water flight ever undertaken.

At 2 a.m. the plane was passing over the Phoenix island group, having flown one degree and 35 minutes south and 42 minutes west of Canton island, where Kingsford-Smith had indicated before leaving here Sunday that he might land if necessary.

At the above hour the plane's radio operator reported its position at 37 south and 17.1 west longitude, or near Enderbury island.

BACCALAUREATE SERVICES HELD FOR GRADUATES

Rev. Toensmeier Delivers Splendid Address, Citing Lindbergh As Example

The baccalaureate service, with the farewell sermon to the year's graduating class, was held Sunday night, at the Presbyterian church. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Emil S. Toensmeier. He was assisted by the Franklin McElfresh of the Methodist church, who offered the pastoral prayer, the doxology and the benediction.

Special music was sung by the quartet, composed of Miss Helen Marion, Mrs. Sennet Cryder, Mr. Eli S. Roper and Mr. Mack Parrell. They sang the anthem "Fear Not, O Israel," by Spicker. Also for an offertory solo, Miss Marion sang a familiar and very much admired song, "How Beautiful Upon the Mountains" by Barker. Following the sermon, the quartet sang another anthem, "Remember Now Thy Creator," by Adams, which was familiar to the high school students. Miss Abbe Clarke, organ accompanist, played "Festival Prelude" by Frydinger as a prelude.

The church had been very tastefully decorated for the service by the flower committee of the church. Beautiful pink and white peonies in seven large baskets were the only flowers used. The church auditorium and the entire Sunday school room were crowded with friends and relatives of the graduating class and members of the Presbyterian congregation.

MAN AND TWO BOYS DIE AT R. R. CROSSING

On Way To Baptismal Ceremony Near Washington C. H. As Death Strikes

WASHINGTON C. H., June 4.—A trip to a baptismal ceremony was overtaken by tragedy at Cook Station, 12 miles north of here, Sunday when an automobile in which five persons were riding was struck by northbound B. and O. passenger train No. 38, killing three and seriously injuring two.

The dead are Ray Hiestand, 30; Robert Kennel, 8, and Dean Kennel, 6. H. T. Hiestand, 65, father of Ray, was so seriously injured he may die, physicians said tonight, while Percy Kennel, 35, will recover from less serious hurts, it was said.

All five live near Bloomingburg, Fayette County.

Percy Kennel was driving. There is a clear view of the tracks at the crossing.

Persons on the Cook Station platform said the engine of Kennel's car stalled on the tracks. The two boys and Ray Hiestand were in the rear seat of the machine, which was caught squarely by the locomotive. The train does not stop at Cook Station.

The machine was carried about 50 yards on the pilot of the engine. Percy Kennel and H. T. Hiestand, riding beside him, were thrown from the machine by force of the impact. Both were unconscious when help reached them.

Ray Hiestand is survived by his widow and one child.

DOG TEAMS IN ITALIA SEARCH; HUNT WIDENS

While Ice Becomes Dense As Ship Also Goes After Missing Dirigible

KINGS BAY, Spitzbergen, June 4.—The search for General Umberto Nobile and his crew of the Polar dirigible Italia widened today with arrival of new rescue parties in the northern regions where the Italia is believed to have landed.

Dog teams struck out over the frozen, ice bound territory, guided by expert guides, and will go inland in hopes of rescuing the famous Italian explorer and his courageous aides who have been missing now for 10 days. They have hopes of finding the crew alive—possibly heading back through the trail-less land towards Kings Bay.

The whaler Braganza, chartered by the Italian government, is proceeding north and advised the base here that she had passed Amsterdam island shortly after midnight.

The vessel reported she was heading eastward from the island but that ice was becoming more dense. The ice thus far has not blocked the vessel's progress.

The Braganza carries 13 Italian chasseurs, in command of Captains Sora and Tomaselli, who will land and make searches. They will continue the expedition for a week, weather permitting.

Meanwhile other relief expeditions—including the great program planned by the Norwegian government—were understood to be either in the north or starting towards that zone. Some of these expeditions carry airplanes which will be sent out of a central point on scouting tours over the territory.

A foreboding note was carried out today when the crew of the Citta Di Milano, the relief vessel, dismantled the big hangar that had been open awaiting the return of the dirigible Italia from its cruise to the North Pole.

TWO INJURED IN ACCIDENT HERE; CAR IS DAMAGED

In an auto accident on N. Court-st. near York-st. early Monday morning, M. S. Cox, superintendent of schools at McArthur, sustained a fracture of the ulna of his left arm; E. L. Burns, superintendent of the Allenville schools, who was with him, sustained a gash in his right leg. Their injuries were dressed by Dr. Courtwright. The car, an Oldsmobile coupe, was brought in by the Circleville Motors garage.

Professor Cox said that he was driving from his home in McArthur to Columbus and near York-st. noticed a milk delivery wagon was at the curb. A southbound traction car had stopped to discharge a passenger and in order to avoid hitting the passenger, he turned his wheel to cross over to the west side of the street. His car skidded and hit a tree in front of the residence of J. H. Myers. The windshield and side door of his car was broken, and in the sudden jolt of the car Professor Burns was thrown up against Mr. Cox. His weight snapped the ulna in Mr. Cox's left arm.

After their car was put in order, they proceeded on their way to Columbus.

Street Lighting Is Real Economy

Anything is economical when the benefits which it produces are greater than its cost.

Street lighting is not expensive. Statistics show that the average annual cost of lighting the streets in all cities in the United States is only a few cents per capita, and that the average for the five best lighted cities is only two cents per capita.

Compare this with the expense of running one of the other departments of our government and consider the relative benefits derived from each.

In many cases after the installation of an adequate street lighting system it has been found that an actual saving has been made for the tax payer. Because of the fact that the streets are well lighted, the danger from fire is lessened, and the fire and other departments are not overburdened with the cost of fire fighting. Of course this probably represents exceptional cases, but some saving can certainly be effected from these sources.

The church had been very tastefully decorated for the service by the flower committee of the church. Beautiful pink and white peonies in seven large baskets were the only flowers used. The church auditorium and the entire Sunday school room were crowded with friends and relatives of the graduating class and members of the Presbyterian congregation.

MAN AND TWO BOYS DIE AT R. R. CROSSING

On Way To Baptismal Ceremony Near Washington C. H. As Death Strikes

WASHINGTON C. H., June 4.—A trip to a baptismal ceremony was overtaken by tragedy at Cook Station, 12 miles north of here, Sunday when an automobile in which five persons were riding was struck by northbound B. and O. passenger train No. 38, killing three and seriously injuring two.

The dead are Ray Hiestand, 30; Robert Kennel, 8, and Dean Kennel, 6. H. T. Hiestand, 65, father of Ray, was so seriously injured he may die, physicians said tonight, while Percy Kennel, 35, will recover from less serious hurts, it was said.

All five live near Bloomingburg, Fayette County.

Percy Kennel was driving. There is a clear view of the tracks at the crossing.

Persons on the Cook Station platform said the engine of Kennel's car stalled on the tracks. The two boys and Ray Hiestand were in the rear seat of the machine, which was caught squarely by the locomotive. The train does not stop at Cook Station.

The machine was carried about 50 yards on the pilot of the engine. Percy Kennel and H. T. Hiestand, riding beside him, were thrown from the machine by force of the impact. Both were unconscious when help reached them.

Ray Hiestand is survived by his widow and one child.

HERE IS CHANCE TO WIN $50 WITH SLOGAN CONTEST

Merchants Of Circleville Offer Chance To Everyone And Here's How

How well do you remember slogans of Circleville merchants or the slogan or trade mark of some products sold in Circleville?

Sounds easy doesn't it and it will be just as easy to get in on the prize money if you start in today and get these answers filled out on the blank furnished with the contest.

Some of the slogans are used by Circleville merchants. You have seen them many a time but have you remembered who used them. Get the old thinking cap to working and get started. Some of the slogans are for products that are generally advertised and are sold right here in Circleville. Who sells them? That's where you can get acquainted with the stores and the products they sell. It's easy and the thing to remember in filling out the answer blank, when the slogan is for a product, is to put the name of the product and the merchant's name who sells this product.

The answers must be right to get in on the prizes and then too remember that the first ones in have the better chance to win the big prize for there is but one award for each prize and the sooner your answer is mailed or brought to the HERALD office, in a sealed envelope, the better chance you will have.

Read all about it in the page advertisement on Page 3, this issue. The first prize is $25, second $10, third $5 and fourth, $1. Ten prizes of $1 each will be offered as the fourth.

DOG TEAMS IN ITALIA SEARCH; HUNT WIDENS

While Ice Becomes Dense As Ship Also Goes After Missing Dirigible

KINGS BAY, Spitzbergen, June 4.—The search for General Umberto Nobile and his crew of the Polar dirigible Italia widened today with arrival of new rescue parties in the northern regions where the Italia is believed to have landed.

Dog teams struck out over the frozen, ice bound territory, guided by expert guides, and will go inland in hopes of rescuing the famous Italian explorer and his courageous aides who have been missing now for 10 days. They have hopes of finding the crew alive—possibly beating back through the trail-less land towards Kings Bay.

The whaler Braganza, chartered by the Italian government, is proceeding north and advised the base here that she had passed Amsterdam island shortly after midnight.

The vessel reported she was heading eastward from the island but that ice was becoming more dense. The ice thus far has not blocked the vessel's progress.

The Braganza carries 13 Italian chasseurs, in command of Captains Sora and Tomasetti, who will land and make searches. They will continue the expedition for a week, weather permitting.

Meanwhile other relief expeditions—including the great program planned by the Norwegian government—were understood to be either in the north or starting towards that zone. Some of these expeditions carry airplanes which will be sent out of a central point on scouting tours over the territory.

A forlorn note was carried out today when the crew of the Citta Di Milano, the relief vessel, dismantled the big hangar that had been open awaiting the return of the dirigible Italia from its cruise to the North Pole.

PLANE MAKING FINE TIME ON PACIFIC TRIP

Passes Over Phoenix Island Group And Radio That "All Is O. K."

TODAY IN THE AIR
Captain Charles Kingsford-Smith and his three companions in the Southern Cross were speeding across the Pacific from Hawaii to Suva, Fiji islands, making 90 knots an hour. They are due to arrive at 8 p.m. After a stop at Suva they will go on to Australia.

Miss Amelia Earhart, Boston social worker, and Wilmer Stultz held the tri-motored Fokker monoplane friendship in readiness for a flight from Halifax to London, with the start scheduled for this afternoon. They were forced down by fog after flying from Boston.

The ice-cutting ship Braganza was forcing its way to the north coast of Spitzbergen in the hope of reaching reindeer land and taking up the search for General Umberto Nobile and the missing dirigible Italia. An SOS picked up in Russia, said the Italia was in Franz Josef land. Lieut. Luetzow Holm, Norwegian flier, prepared to start a search from Kings Bay in his naval seaplane.

Capt. Arrachart and Major Rignot, who attempted to set a long-distance flight record from Le Bourget Field, Paris, were forced down at Constantinople. India was their destination.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh flew for an unknown destination after landing at El Paso, Tex., from San Diego, Cal.

HONOLULU, June 4.—A faint message saying "All is well," was picked up from the trans-Pacific plane Southern Cross at 5:30 a.m. today, Honolulu time (8 a.m. Pacific coast standard time,) by the Mutual Wireless company. Other words were sent in the message, but the signals were weak.

The Southern Cross was so far from Honolulu that communication was becoming exceedingly difficult.

If the Southern Cross maintained its present speed, it would arrive in Suva at between 5 and 6 p.m. Pacific time, today.

HONOLULU, T. H., June 4.—Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith, and his three companions aboard the airplane Southern Cross passed up their first chance to land today while enroute from Honolulu to Suva in the Fiji islands—the longest over-water flight ever undertaken.

At 2 a.m., the plane was passing over the Phoenix island group, having flown one degree and 35 minutes south and 42 minutes west of Canton island, where Kingsford-Smith had indicated before leaving here Sunday that he might land if necessary.

At the above hour the plane's radio operator reported its position at 37 south and 17.1 west longitude, or near Enderbury island.

Street Lighting Is Real Economy

Anything is economical when the benefits which it produces are greater than its cost.

Street lighting is not expensive. Statistics show that the average annual cost of lighting the streets in all cities in the United States is only seventy-one cents per capita and that the average for the fifty best lighted cities is only two dollars and four cents per capita. Compare this with the expense of running some of the other departments of civic government and consider the relative benefits derived from each.

In many cases, after the installation of an adequate street lighting system, it has been found that an actual saving has been made for the tax payer. Because of the streets being well lighted, a reduction was possible in the police, fire and other departments which more than offset the cost of the lighting. Of course these were probably exceptional cases, but some saving can certainly be expected from these sources.

The prosperity of a city always increases after the installation of an adequate system of street lighting. It gives an atmosphere of progressiveness. New industries are attracted to the place, bringing with them progressive business men and workers, men of brains and brawn such as are a welcome addition to any population.

The merchant's business increases with the prosperity of the community for prosperity always increases a man's wants and his ability to supply them. The city becomes known as a business center and citizens from outlying districts are attracted here to patronize the shops and places of amusement, especially in these days of easy transportation.

Adequate street lighting makes the community a more desirable place in which to live. The demand for both dwellings and business places is increased and property values are raised. The increase in real estate value will, in most cases, more than offset the cost of the street lighting installation to the tax-payer.

Aside from the benefits which can be figured in dollars and cents, there are certain advantages derived from adequate street lighting which do not appear on the ledger but which should not be overlooked.

If you are abroad after dark, where do you feel more secure, on a lighted street, or a dark one? Or if you are driving a car, when do you most fear an accident, while going through a well lighted thoroughfare or while going through some dark side street? Is not this feeling of security and safety worth considering?

Then again, we like to have our city spoken of as a progressive community. We take pride in our improvements. No one thing adds more to the appearance of a city, per dollar invested, than street lighting.

Thus, we speak of the "Economy of Street Lighting." No one would think of dispensing with the police or fire departments because they cost money; these departments have long since proved their worth. An adequate street lighting system will also prove its worth as it has done wherever tried.

Southern Cross had passed over the equator after riding out a bad storm with radio battery and engine trouble.

When the plane reported its position beyond Canton island it indicated clearly that it was out for non-stop flight to Suva. At the time of the last report the plane had covered more than half of the 3100 miles from Honolulu to the Fiji islands.

SYDNEY, Australia, June 4.—With the monoplane Southern Cross more than half way across the Pacific ocean, elaborate preparations were being made in Sydney to greet the crew of four when they arrive here several days hence.

Reports indicated the greatest interest had been aroused in all of Australia over the flight of Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith, Australian war ace, and his companions.

The fliers are not expected here for a few days yet, but the preparations for their reception are going ahead at great speed.

Bert Hinkler, famous Australian aviator, plans to fly to greet the Southern Cross off the coast of Australia.

"I praise and congratulate the American backer of the Kingsford-Smith expedition," Hinkler said. "America leads the world in support of aviation and initiative."

HONOLULU, June 4.—Menaced by tropical storms and motor trouble, the monoplane Southern Cross today blazed a new air trail over the South seas.

Although Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith and his three companions assured the outside world that they were "plowing right along," their radio messages revealed dangers which might at any moment spell disaster to their pioneering California-to-Australia flight.

The four men were attempting a non-stop trip from the Hawaiian islands to Suva, in the Fiji islands, 3,138 miles away. It was the second and most hazardous leg of their 7,778-mile journey to Brisbane.

Braving the perils of the flight with Kingsford-Smith were Capt. Charles T. P. Ulm, his fellow Australian and relief pilot, Lieut. Harry W. Lyon, American navigator, and radio operator James Warner.

The airman were beset by rain squalls throughout the first half of the long voyage. Sometimes they dove into them headlong, but at other times the storms were so severe they were forced to climb rapidly above the black clouds.

During the night the left motor of the Southern Cross sputtered temperamental, but the fliers courageously minimized the danger. Their spirits high and their confidence undisturbed, they kept the nose of the huge three-motored craft pointed at the great constellation in the southern skies for which it was named.

at Ashville, August 15, 1900. His wife survives. Of his immediate family, a sister, Mrs. Mabel Shockley, and a niece, Eloise Shockley, are living.

Mr. Vest was a good citizen, and held in high esteem by a host of friends. Socially he was a member of the Ashville lodge Knights of Pythias, and was also affiliated with the Lutheran church.

The funeral services will be held Wednesday, June 6, at his late home on Main-st. at 3 p. m. Rev. H. H. Glick of the Lutheran church, will officiate. The pallbearers will be Earl Noggle, William Wilson, Edward Rumble, George Hook, Ray Bowsher and Arthur George.

His remains will be interred in the Reber Hill cemetery under the direction of Fred C. Clark of the Albaugh company of this city.

When buying was one long experiment

"I'll try a pound of this," said your grandmother, "—if you are sure it's fresh."

That was some time in the second hour of her morning's search for groceries. She went from one open barrel or box to the next, along an unappetizing row of crackers, teas, cereals, dried fruits, lard and sugar—all in bulk. She shooed the flies away, looked at, touched and tasted each article suspiciously, and finally decided to buy or not to buy, as her judgment directed. She couldn't trust a servant to do it. It was a day's work in itself.

Today, in two minutes, you give the grocer your order. You know that everything you get will be fresh, pure, attractively and cleanly packed. Why? Because you ask for ADVERTISED BRANDS.

Advertising has taken hours of hard labor out of every housewife's day, and lines of worry off her forehead. It has made the morning's marketing a matter of certainty instead of guesswork.

DANNY RAE BURN AND O'RILEY PROMISE REAL TILT

REAL CARD ON FOR TONIGHT IN C. A. C. RING

Warren Scrapper To Meet Tommy O'Riley In Main Go At 8:30 P. M.

There's a real fight on tonight at the C.A.C.

When the opening gong sounds Tommy O'Riley, Circleville pride, will step into the ring to meet a real opponent in Danny Raeburn, Warren youngster. The two will fight at 118 pounds and will mix it up for 10 rounds provided the old K.O. isn't administered, one way or the other.

This tilt should provide the fans with plenty of heart bumps and promoters are figuring on a real crowd.

If you haven't already planned on going, better reserve tonight solely for the fight.

Several real preliminaries are also on tap.

Jack Knapp, of Chillicothe, will meet Bernard Haynes, of Circleville, in an 8-round semi-final. These boys are welterweights and will weigh in at 145 pounds. They should prove interesting.

"Chinkie" George, also of Chillicothe, and "Salty" Toles, hailing from this seat of fistdom and who has afforded the fans plenty of pleasure, before, will meet at 147 pounds in a 6-round prelim.

Dick Evans, Toledo, and "Red" O'Connell, of Dayton, will battle it out for the junior lightweight honors at 130 pounds.

When it comes to Danny Raeburn, fans are promised a chance to see a real brawler.

In 1926, Danny won the Ohio Amateur fight honors at Cleveland and was presented with a diamond ring.

He was champion of the states of Ohio, Pennsylvania and in Toronto, Canada. Since turning pro, following his triumph in 1926, he has won 12 of his 14 bouts, six by the K. O. route. With three exceptions, he has floored every one of his opponents at least one.

He has been doing some real scrapping and has a great following. Danny at present is a student at Ohio Northern University.

Prices tonight are $1 plus war tax for the men, 25 cents for women and children while standing room in the balcony will be sold for 50 cents.

The doors open at 8:15 p.m.

"Red-Hots"

At a recent musical program only three members of the quartet appeared on the stage while the fourth entered from the front door in costume with a fiery red wig. HELEN WILLS IN FINE SHAPE FOR FUTURE MATCHES

ROLAND GARROS STADIUM, PARIS, June 4.—Helen Wills of California, scheduled to meet Ellen Bennett of England in the finals of the women's singles in the French national championships today, has been accepted in advance by the tennis experts who have watched her play during the past fortnight as the greatest woman player in the world.

Rene La Coste and other French stars who have observed Helen in action at Paris now declare her better than their own Suzanne Lenglen.

"She would beat Suzanne and most men," said a noted French expert, who had hitherto held Miss Lenglen invincible.

Christabel Hardie, English girl who was Miss Wills' victim in the semi-finals Sunday, was completely overwhelmed by the fury of the American champion's attack. Realizing that her only chance to make points was to keep the ball in play and leave it to Helen to make the errors, Miss Hardie put up a game but fruitless fight.

Miss Wills refused to meet her opponent at a soft game of exchanges, but forced a terrific pace, hitting like a man, crashing into the English player's soft service with slashing returns, sharply angled across the court.

DAVIS CUP TEAM SAILS SATURDAY AFTER GREAT WIN

CHICAGO, June 4.—After a clean sweep of their final American zone matches with Japan, the United States Davis Cup team will sail next Saturday for Europe.

The team will be composed of William T. Tilden II, captain; George Lott of Chicago; John Hennessey of Indianapolis and Wilbur F. O'Connell, Jr., Kansas City youth. They will meet in London by Francis Hunter, another member of the team.

Tilden defeated Yoshiro Ohta yesterday 6-8, 6-3, 6-1 and 6-0 in the final singles round which had no effect on the United States already had won three out of five rounds.

Coen defeated Tami, Abe 7-9, 6-2, 6-4 and 7-5. The youngster appeared nervous and over-anxious in his first match but after losing it he quieted down and took the remaining sets.

RED TIGHT

COLUMBUS, June 4.—Red Fitzsimmons, formerly of Texas and more recently of Columbus boxing circles, will clash tonight with Roy Wallace, handsome Hoosier from Indianapolis in a 12-round bout here.

The fighters, light heavyweights, have met before. Fitz went down before the T. N. T. packed fists of Wallace in the latter's home town, and the rugged redhead will be out for blood.

The Right Moment

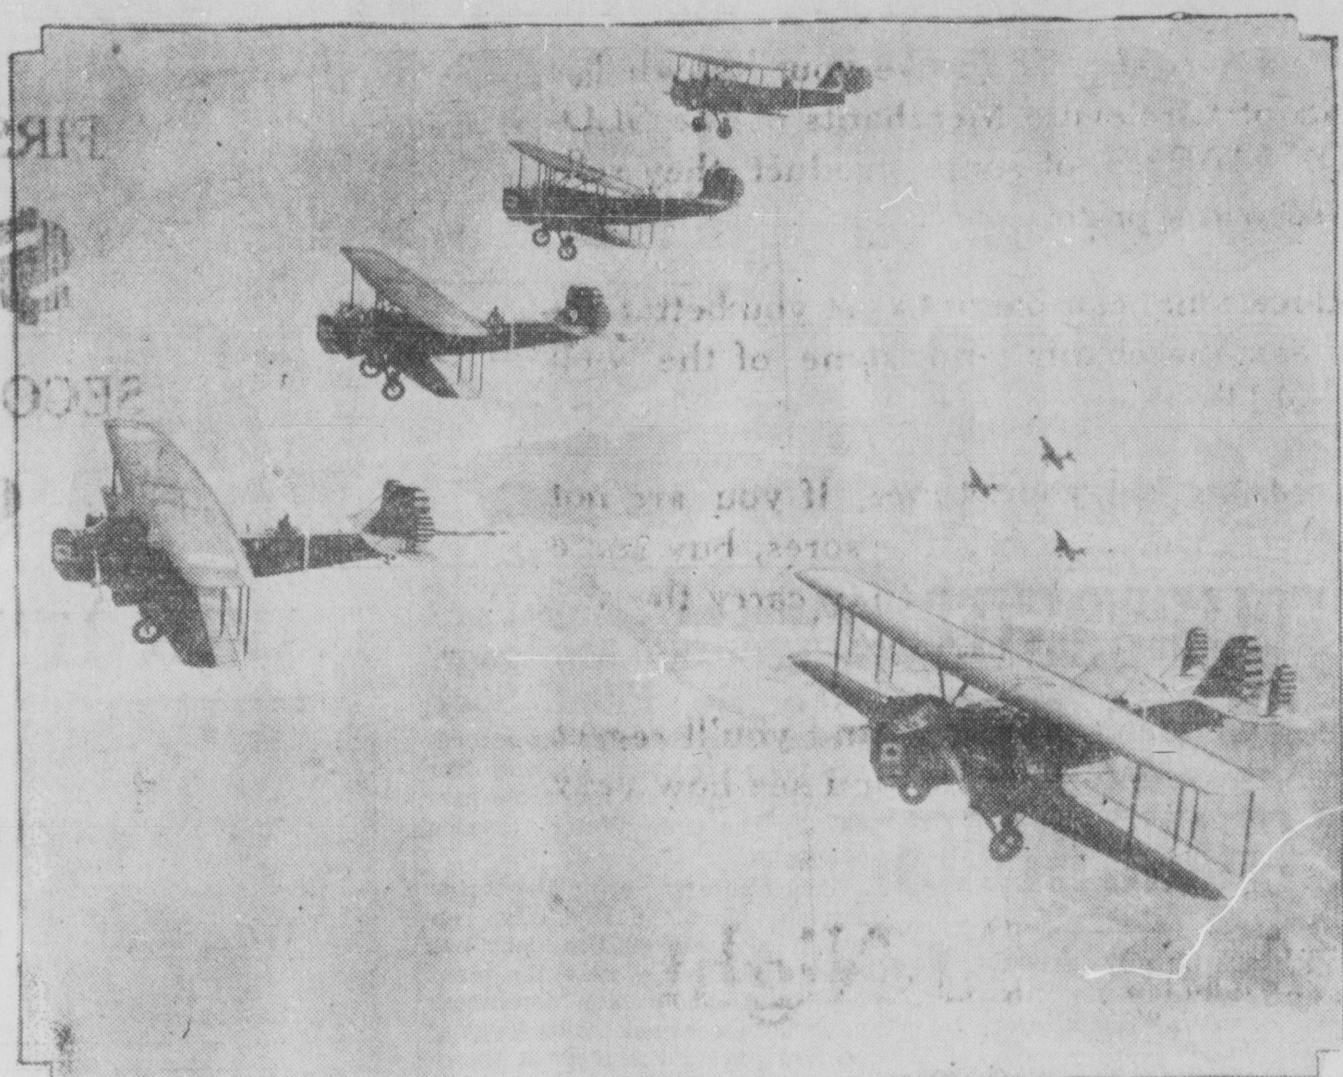

Getting what you want is pretty much a matter of asking for it at the right moment. Patience and self-control may mean delay, but they bring home the bacon in the end. Having the forbearance not to argue with some one who is angry or out of humor is pretty likely to win the argument for you eventually. The power of discretion is as great as the power of aggression.

CHICAGO, June 4.—Several dash records may fall when the National Collegiate A. A. track and field championships are held at Soldiers' Field here Friday and Saturday.

The entrants in the sprint events will include some of the country's fastest dash men. Thirteen of them have stepped 100 yards in less than 10 seconds, and fourteen have made 220 yards under 22 seconds.

In the furlong will be George Simpson of Ohio State, Hamm of Georgia Tech; Stevenson of Iowa, Grodsky of Michigan; Wengle of Iowa State and Walter of Northwestern.

Obey Life's Laws and Keep Spirit of Youth

There has been no improvement in the longevity of human life in the past one hundred years for those who reach the age of fifty, a writer in Physical Culture Magazine maintains. By improving the mortality record of the earlier years of life, he admits, the average span of life has nearly doubled in the last two or three centuries. But he says the chances for life for a man of middle age have not improved in the last century.

"The proper way to prolong life," he declares, "is to get more life, to live more completely, to make your self more alive to every part of your bodily organism."

"There is much about the human body that is beyond our understanding. The most learned anatomical expert finds that the more he studies the body the more he realizes how numerous are the unsolvable mysteries that are hidden within it. Then why tamper with this marvelously constructed organism? Why not try to interpret the laws of life and health as indicated by the endeavors of the body itself to build and maintain health?"

"Then the spirit of youth can be retained on and on, at times even to old age; for life is worth little or nothing when the decrepitude of senility creeps upon you."

Mightier Than the Purse

How a California newspaper man's pen became as mighty as a well-filled purse is told by V. C. of Hayward, Calif. Scouring the town for stories, the reporter came upon a poverty-stricken little family occupying two rooms, with no beds and very little of anything else. The children slept huddled on the floor. Into his graphic next day went a faithful and colorful description. The following day he spent the better hours declining furniture, bedding, clothing, and food for the family, for the proffered supply soon exceeded the immediate needs.

Goldfish Popular

The little goldfish, which by its sparkling brilliance animates the sun rooms of many homes, is the most widely cultivated of creatures used for purely ornamental purposes. The Chinese are credited with the first artificial development of the breed. Their cultivation was taken up as a hobby by many crowned heads of Europe centuries ago and is now a well-developed industry in this country.—New York Herald-Tribune.

Skim Milk Is Valuable for the Growing Pigs

Every breeder of pigs knows how valuable skim milk is for growing pigs. In the standard book "Feeds and Feeding," Professors Henry and Morrison state: "For swine of all ages, and especially for young pigs, skim milk is unsurpassed as a supplement to the carbonaceous grains." In districts where there is no fresh skim milk dry skim milk will supply the same healthy growth as fresh skim milk will. One pound of dry skim milk (dry in grain mix, or in water to drink) equals three

WAR'S WRECKAGE

A somewhat startling statement appeared a few days ago, to the effect that the American Red Cross is still extending care to 25,000 World War veterans who are still in veterans' bureau hospitals. Of these there are 12,500 who are suffering from mental diseases.

Soon after the war closed, people were quite conscious of the suffering which had been left behind in the wake of conflict. It took time to provide the veterans with adequate care, and the country felt full of sympathy when delays occurred in giving such care.

But now, we do not see much visible evidence of suffering. The men who were knocked out by this terrible experience, are more or less grouped in hospitals located in a limited number of communities, and the great majority of us are scarcely conscious of their existence, save as we may have relatives and friends among this unfortunate number.

The war experience was a terrible one for a great many of these men. For as the figures quoted above show, those frightful experiences often unhinged reason. It seems a terribly pathetic thing that we have to ask men to go through with these things that make the rest of their lives a torture, or which deprive them of their limbs or eyes or hearing. No gift we can make them, no care we can give them, nothing we can do to help them earn a living, can compensate them for having to go through life maimed and often helpless, or with their mental power shattered.

The best thing we can do now is to resolve that war is an act of supreme folly, and that if a friendly and peaceful policy toward all nations on our part can help avert it in future, we shall not create this human wreckage again.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF BUSINESS.

How far is business responsible for community welfare along social and economic lines? The foregoing question was prominent among the questions discussed by the United States Chamber of Commerce at its recent annual meeting at Washington.

Formerly it was thought that business had not much of what could be called social responsibility. Its obligation was simply to pay the wages for which help could be hired, and if it did that and paid its debts, then it performed all obligations.

Of course, the first and by far the more essential duty, is for a concern to run its affairs on a solvent basis, and provide regular employment. A business that pays its debts promptly, and that hands out regular pay to its workers at fair wages is performing its duty. It has gone a long way toward fulfilling its obligations. A concern might be very philanthropic, and yet if it failed to give good pay for regular work, its service would be faulty.

But after a business does provide this fair and regular employment, and gets on a thoroughly stable basis, its obligations are not finished. It should try to see to it that its employees can live in an American way. If there is a lack for instance, of good homes for its workers, it should try in some way to get these homes provided. It needs to work for a good community in which its work-people stand a chance of bringing up a family under wholesome conditions. But of course its workers must co-operate heartily with such efforts in various ways.

The business concerns of Ohio have on the whole been very prosperous, and they owe it to the state and community to do everything possible for good living conditions, education and public and personal welfare.

IT'S JUNE

And now it's June
And roses red
Will lift
A fragrant colored
Head
Here in my dreamy
Garden bower
I'll while away
A blessed hour
In retrospection,
Birds will sing,
And Life will go by
On a wing;
It's June; Across
The way a
Friend
Has pledged his faith
Unto the end;
A bride and groom walk
Hand in hand
Leaving their foot-prints
On Life's sand,
And here's a world at
Silent peace,
For June, somehow, brings
Its surcease
From pain and worry,
Earthly care
Slips by,
For each June day is
Fair—
The oriole sings
His sweet lay,
A gentle wind comes
In to say,
"Well here I am!",
Life's at its
Noon
Throughout
This entire month
Of June—

And what we mean to say
Is,
It's great to be alive
In June,
The trouble is,
It leaves too soon,
And that's the way
With pleasant things
For which a sad
Heart
Yearns and sings:
But still that's right,
Our joyful song
Would cease
If it stayed here
Too long;
June comes for just a
Kiss, then goes
And leaves the memory
Of a rose.

Masculine Preferred

If ever it was deemed a hardship to have been born a girl, that can no longer be the attitude of mind of any one who sees how close open to women are all the doors of opportunity. But a Portland (Maine) boy must still be of the opinion that he was in luck to have been born of the masculine sex.
Recently in Sunday school the subject of regeneration was being discussed. When told that it meant to be born again, he made it clear that he was not in favor of it.
When asked his reason, he said:
"How do I know that if I was to be born again I wouldn't be a girl?"

CHAPTER I.

A heavy mist rolled up from the harbor, crept about the Battery and over Bowling Green, reaching out its grasping white fingers like hungry ghost-hands. It lingered over Broadway, bringing with it little furies of rain. Taxicabs ehrlaked and skidded noisily in the evening rush of theatre-goers. Up along the Drive the river flowed gray and colorless, save for the odd, dying reflections of light filtering down from the lofty Pallisades, faintly blue and gloomy in the grimness of the fog. Down along Fifth Avenue the street lamps sent out wavering areas of ghastly yellow that repeated themselves in ever and ever widening circles, and were quickly swallowed up in the blackness.

Up through the Bowers came the long, hollow sounds of the steamboat whistles, whining dully like baying dogs at night. At intervals the rattling, rumbling, grinding noise of the elevated overhead, winding like a long, red-and-green-eyed caterpillar drowned out the clatter of the great horse trucks, bounding on the cobblestones below. Motor sirens whirled as the vast bodies lurched dizzily round the black iron pillars, as though playing a gruesome game of "In and Out the Window."

The girl with the golden-blond hair gazed up at him.

At the corner of the Bowers and Grand Street a policeman in a great rain-coat opened the yellow box on the iron post and rang in. On down through the Tenderloin district the shops along the street shouted their wares. Jewels, imitation and real, glittered alluringly. Small, murky lights loomed here and there in dingy windows. Black-shuttered doors sent forth a reeking odor of stale beer and cheap whiskey, intermingling with the aroma of the hot-dog stands and their great piles of chopped onions and peppers.

Tailorhouses with gaping windows crowded against the tenements wherein innumerable lives came into being, struggled, and died. Below, on the street, passers-by scurried along, intent on business, or loitered in dark alley-ways, perfumes mingling with the smell of warm bodies, food and drink. Warm, white shoulders; sparkling stones; damp faces pressed close against soft-gleaming hair.

"All right, kid?" The tall, good-looking, very young man with the sleek, dark hair that curled slightly over the temples, grinned down at his partner.

"Uh huh!" The girl with the golden-blond hair and the big, blue eyes, gazed up at him in answer and smiled happily. Her tiny feet, encased in satin slippers, frayed and soiled, tapped out the time, tracing the intricate steps set by the tall man with the dark hair. Her pale blue georgette dress with the tight bodice revealed the youthfulness of her delicate figure to advantage, and the full, circular skirt swung about her slender, shapely legs in gay abandon.

The two wove their way around the room, zigzagging into each other's eyes, forgetful of the crowd about them. The blonde, curly hair of the girl against the shoulder of the man's tuxedo coat, and now and then he bent his head to whisper something in the girl's ear. Suddenly she looked up with a little grimace of pain as a heavy heel came down on the toe of her slipper.

"You big bum! Whadda you mean?" The tall man pressed his partner more closely to him and turned his head to glare at the round gentleman who had so intruded on the girl's dancing.

"It's all right, Chuck!" The girl patted the tall man's arm, her wide eyes opening in fright.

"Aw, shut your trap!" the stout man muttered, casting a hateful glare at his assailant. "Sorry, miss," he apologized, as he swung his own partner past the girl and remarked her young beauty.

Frugality

As boys should be educated with temperance, so the greatest lesson that should be taught them is to admire frugality. It is by the exercise of this virtue alone that they can ever expect to be useful members of society. It is true, lectures continually repeated upon this subject may make some boys when they grow up, run into an extreme, and become misers; but were well had we more misers than we have amongst us.—Goldsmith.

But now, we do not see much visible evidence of suffering. The men who were knocked out by this terrible experience, are more or less grouped in hospitals located in a limited number of communities, and the great majority of us are scarcely conscious of their existence, save as we may have relatives and friends among this unfortunate number.

The war experience was a terrible one for a great many of these men. For as the figures quoted above show, those frightful experiences often unhealed reason. It seems a terribly pathetic thing that we have to ask men to go through with these things that make the rest of their lives a torture, or which deprive them of their limbs or eyes or hearing. No gift we can make them, no care we can give them, nothing we can do to help them earn a living, can compensate them for having to go through life maimed and often helpless, or with their mental power shattered.

The best thing we can do now is to resolve that war is an act of supreme folly, and that if a friendly and peaceful policy toward all nations on our part can help avert it in future, we shall not create this human wreckage again.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF BUSINESS.

How far is business responsible for community welfare along social and economic lines? The foregoing question was prominent among the questions discussed by the United States Chamber of Commerce at its recent annual meeting at Washington.

Formerly it was thought that business had not much of what could be called social responsibility. Its obligation was simply to pay the wages for which help could be hired, and if it did that and paid its debts, then it performed all obligations.

Of course, the first and by far the more essential duty, is for a concern to run its affairs on a solvent basis, and provide regular employment. A business that pays its debts promptly, and that hands out regular pay to its workers at fair wages is performing its duty. It has gone a long way toward fulfilling its obligations. A concern might be very philanthropic, and yet if it failed to give good pay for regular work, its service would be faulty.

But after a business does provide this fair and regular employment, and gets on a thoroughly stable basis, its obligations are not finished. It should try to see to it that its employees can live in an American way. If there is a lack for instance, of good homes for its workers, it should try in some way to get these homes provided. It needs to work for a good community in which its work-people stand a chance to bring up a family under wholesome conditions. But of course its workers must co-operate heartily with such efforts in various ways.

The business concerns of Ohio have on the whole been very prosperous, and they owe it to the state and community to do everything possible for good living conditions, education and public and personal welfare.

IT'S JUNE

And now it's June
And roses red
Will lift
A fragrant colored
Head
Here in my dreamy
Garden bower
I'll while away
A blessed hour
In retrospection,
Birds will sing,
And Life will go by
On a wing;
It's June; Across
The way a
Friend
Has pledged his faith
Unto the end;
A bride and groom walk
Hand in hand
Leaving their foot-prints
On Life's sand,
And here's a world at
Silent peace,
For June, somehow, brings
Its surcease
From pain and worry,
Earthly care
Slips by,
For each June day is
Fair—
The oriole sings
His sweet lay,
A gentle wind comes
In to say,
"Well here I am!",
Life's at its
Noon
Throughout
This entire month
Of June—
And what we mean to say
Is,
It's great to be alive
In June,
The trouble is,
It leaves too soon,
And that's the way
With pleasant things
For which a sad
Heart
Years and sings;
But still that's right,
Our joyful song
Would cease
If it stayed here
Too long;
June comes for just a
Kiss, then goes
And leaves the memory
Of a rose.

Masculine Preferred

If ever it was deemed a handicap to have been born a girl, that can no longer be the attitude of mind of any one who sees how wide open to women are all the doors of opportunity. But a Portland (Maine) boy must still be of the opinion that he was in luck to have been born of the masculine gender. Recently in Sunday school the subject of regeneration was being discussed. When told that it meant to be born again, he made it clear that he was not in favor of it. When asked his reason, he said: "How do I know that if I was to be born again I wouldn't be a girl?"

CHAPTER I.

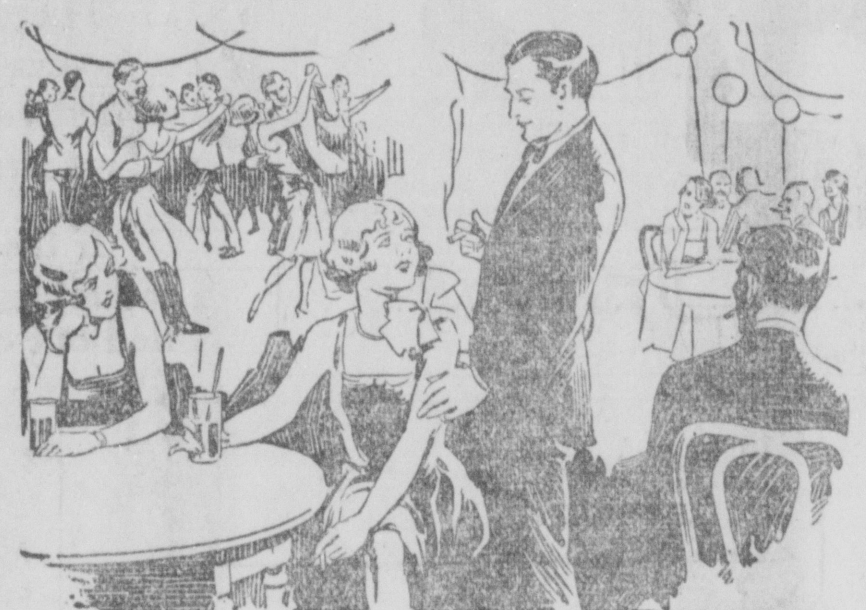

A heavy mist rolled up from the harbor, crept about the Battery and over Bowling Green, reaching out its grasping white fingers like hungry ghost-hands. It lingered over Broadway, bringing with it little furies of rain. Taxicabs shrieked and skidded noisily in the evening rush of theatre-goers. Up along the Drive the river loomed gray and colorless, save for the eddying reflections of light filtering down from the lofty Pallisades, faintly blue and gloomy in the griminess of the fog. Down along Fifth Avenue the street lamps sent out wavering areas of ghastly yellow that repeated themselves in ever and ever widening circles, and were quickly swallowed up in the blackness.

Up through the Bowery came the long, hollow sounds of the steamboat whistles, whining dully like baying dogs at night. At intervals the rattling, rumbling, grinding noise of the elevated overhead, winding like a long, red-and-green-eyed caterpillar, drowned out the clatter of the great horse trucks, pounding on the cobblestones below. Motor sirens whirled as the vast bodies lurched dizzily round the to their companions' arms, their high heels clicking on the hard cement, their short coats pulled tightly about them. Bobbed hair peeped out from beneath tight hat brims; fur scarves twisted about white necks; brilliant ear-rings jangled; diamonds, five dollars down, pay-as-you-please, glistered on stubby fingers.

Up a long flight of steps; through a barred door. Then dancing feet, large and small, moved airily up and down the slippery floor of Kelly's Ringside Cafe. The cold mist shut out the room hung heavy with writhing smoke rings that blued the air in rivalry to the dark jazz band, yowling and shivering up to the ceiling. Waiters skidded across the floor, trays of glasses and food on their shoulders; clanked their burdens down noisily, sliding them across the pine-topped tables with little clinks.

All about the room against the walls were lined innumerable cubby-holes with a table to each. Another row of tables about the slightly raised floor that constituted the dance floor gave the Cafe its name—"Ringside." Hanging baskets of artificial flowers, slightly dusty and bedraggled, swung from gilded

At the corner of the Bowery and Grand Street a policeman in a great rain-coat opened the yellow box on the Tenderloin district the shops along the street shouted their wares. Jewels, imitation and real, glittered alluringly. Small, murky lights loomed here and there in dingy windows. Black-shuttered doors sent forth a reeking odor of stale beer and cheap whiskey, intermingling with the aroma of the hot-dog stands and their great piles of chopped onions and peppers.

Tall warehouses with gapping windows crowded against the tenements wherein innumerable lives came into being, struggled, and died. Below, on the street, passers-by hurried along, intent on business, or loitered in dark alleyways, protecting themselves against the rain. Long, slanting Oriental eyes peered from doorways. Guttural tongues fell thickly on the air, blending strangely with the softer accents of the Latin races. Beneath arch lamps on the corners slatted men peeped from under low pulled hat brims, their hands thrust deep in their pockets, their coat collars pulled high about their necks to shut out the dank coldness.

The tinkle of a coin in the slot of a battered, automatic piano sent discordant notes to mingle with the passing sounds. A click of billiard balls on a pool table. "Come Unto Me All Ye Who Are Heavy Laden and I Will Give You Rest!" The Mission with its star of electric lights shouted its welcome. A clatter of brass checks, and the spinning wheel of a gambling machine. "Wow-w-w!" The shrieking siren of an ambulance cut the clamor of sound. Police whistles shrieked. Traffic stopped. Silence. Then noise again.

Down along a dimly lighted street a bedizened lady of the evening hung forth from her window, appraising the night sights. Laughter; a maddening song; the banging of a door. The clanging of a fire engine, snorting through the street. A squeaky organ, aided by a whanging trombone and the grouped voices of the Salvation Army. The sickening flare of a gas jet against a tin pan. The loud voice of a fakir retelling his wares, gathered a crowd of loiterers. Slinking forms disappeared down short flights of steps and stopped before barred doors, pressing a button and waiting for the tiny, illuminated square that appeared as the eye-slits were drawn back.

Beneath the electric light signs that wavered dizzily, hurrying couples stopped to gaze on the attractions of cafes, shops, motion picture houses. Girls with brilliant, cupid-bow lips, stepped gingerly along over the wet pavements, clinging hooks and chains. Streamers of vari-colored crepe papers, twisted spirals, ran from a high, central light that had been dimmed with light paper, over to the tops of the wall booths.

In the soft, semi-darkness, bodies writhed to the white of the saxophone, bobbed heads against dark shoulders; white hands across black-coated backs. Swaying, pushing, shaking, these marionette-like creatures tapped out the time of the moaning Black-Bottom. Laughter; snatches of songs; broken conversations. A host of cheap perfumes mingling with the smell of warm bodies, food and drink. Warm, white shoulders; sparkling stones; damp faces pressed close against soft-gleaming hair.

"All right, kid?" The tall, good-looking, very young man with the sleek, dark hair that curled slightly over the temples, grinned down at his partner.

"Uh huh!" The girl with the golden-blonde hair and the big, blue eyes, gazed up at him in answer and smiled happily. Her tiny feet, encased in satin slippers, frayed and soiled, tapped out the time, tracing the intricate steps set by the tall man with the dark hair. Her pale blue georgette dress with the tight bodice revealed the youthfulness of her delicate figure to advantage, and the full, circular skirt swung about her slender, shapely legs in gay abandon.

The two wove their way round the room, gazing into each other's eyes, forgetful of the crowd about them. The blonde, curly head nestled against the shoulder of the man's Tuxedo coat, and now and then he bent his head to whisper something in the girl's ear. Suddenly she looked up with a little grimace of pain as a heavy heel came down on the toe of her slipper.

"You big bum! Whadda you mean?" The tall man pressed his partner more closely to him and turned his head to glare at the round gentleman who had so intruded on the girl's dancing.

"It's all right, Chuck!" The girl patted the tall man's arm, her wide eyes opening in delight. "Aw, shut your trap!" the stout man muttered, casting a baleful glare at his assailant. "Sorry, miss," he apologized, as he swung his own partner past the girl and remarked her young loveliness.

"It's all right," the girl nodded. "Come on, Chuck!" She pulled the tall man into the dance again. "All right, if you say so, Rose, but he better not try that again." Chuck White, the beau of the Bowery, sent a backward glance full of menace toward the intruder and hunched his shoulder muscles as though to suggest that it was only for the sake of the girl that he did not press the argument.

Frugality

As boys should be educated with temperance, so the first greatest lesson that should be taught them is to admire frugality. It is by the exercise of this virtue alone that they can ever expect to be useful members of society. It is true that continually repeated upon this subject may make some boys when they grow up, run into an extreme, and become misers; but we were well had we more misers than we have amongst us.—Goldsmith.

Southern Cross had passed over the equator after riding out a bad storm with radio battery and engine trouble.

When the plane reported its position beyond Canton island it indicated clearly that it was out for non-stop flight to Suva. At the time of the last report the plane had covered more than half of the 3100 miles from Honolulu to the Fiji Islands.

SYDNEY, Australia, June 4.—With the monoplane Southern Cross more than half way across the Pacific ocean, elaborate preparations were being made in Sydney to greet the crew of four when they arrive here several days hence.

Reports indicated the greatest interest had been aroused in all of Australia over the flight of Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith, Australian war ace, and his companions.

The fliers are not expected here for a few days yet, but the preparations for their reception are going ahead at great speed.

Bert Hinkler, famous Australian aviator, plans to fly to greet the Southern Cross off the coast of Australia.

"I praise and congratulate the American backer of the Kingsford-Smith expedition," Hinkler said. "America leads the world in support of aviation and initiative."

HONOLULU, June 4.—Menaced by tropical storms and motor trouble, the monoplane Southern Cross today blazed a new air trail over the South seas.

Although Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith and his three companions assured the outside world that they were "plowing right along," their radio messages revealed dangers which might at any moment spell disaster to their pioneering California-to-Australia flight.

The four men were attempting a non-stop trip from the Hawaiian islands to Suva, in the Fiji Islands, 3,138 miles away. It was the second and most hazardous leg of their 7,778-mile journey to Brisbane.

Braving the perils of the flight with Kingsford-Smith were Capt. Charles T. P. Ulm, his fellow Australian and relief pilot, Lieut. Harry W. Lyon, American navigator, and radio operator James Warner.

The airmen were beset by rain squalls throughout the first half of the long voyage. Sometimes they dived into them headlong, but at other times the storms were so severe they were forced to climb rapidly above the black clouds.

During the night the left motor of the Southern Cross sputtered temperamental, but the fliers courageously minimized the danger. Their spirits high and their confidence undisturbed, they kept the nose of the huge three-motored craft pointed at the great constellation in the southern skies for which it was named.

at Ashville, August 15, 1900. His wife survives. Of his immediate family, a sister, Mrs. Mabel Shockley, and a niece, Eloise Shockley, are living.

Mr. Vest was a good citizen, and held in high esteem by a host of friends. Socially he was a member of the Ashville lodge Knights of Pythias, and was also affiliated with the Lutheran church.

The funeral services will be held Wednesday, June 6, at his late home on Main-st., at 3 p. m. Rev. H. H. Glick of the Lutheran church, will officiate. The pallbearers will be Earl Noggle, William Wilson, Edward Runkle, George Hook, Ray Bowsher and Arthur George.

His remains will be interred in the Reber Hill cemetery under the direction of Fred C. Clark of the Albaugh company of this city.

When buying was one long experiment

"I'll try a pound of this," said your grandmother, "—if you are sure it's fresh."

That was some time in the second hour of her morning's search for groceries. She went from one open barrel or box to the next, along an unappetizing row of crackers, teas, cereals, dried fruits, lard and sugar—all in bulk. She shooed the flies away, looked at, touched and tasted each article suspiciously, and finally decided to buy or not to buy, as her judgment directed. She couldn't trust a servant to do it. It was a day's work in itself.

Today, in two minutes, you give the grocer your order. You know that everything you get will be fresh, pure, attractively and cleanly packed. Why? Because you ask for ADVERTISED BRANDS.

Advertising has taken hours of hard labor out of every housewife's day, and lines of worry off her forehead. It has made the morning's marketing a matter of certainty instead of guesswork.

Three Pupils of Miss Stella Becker Take Part In Review

Three Circleville pupils of Miss Stella Becker took part in her annual review, Saturday night at the Central high school auditorium, in Columbus. They were Jeanne Crow, Marvene Wallace and Jean Clifton.

The review was based on a fairy story where household furnishings and toys came to life at the magical hour of midnight. Opportunity for clever entrances was afforded the 150 dancers as the story proceeded, from the time that the boy and girl candle sticks jumped from their places, to experience real adventure, to the big finale, after many adventures with a wicked old Chinaman and a beautiful fairy queen.

Jeanne Crow, an advanced pupil of Miss Becker, first appeared as "Carnival," one of the books, which stood at the back of the stage, supported by two pretty girl book-ends. Hers was a lithe dance with many difficult and technical whirled and leaps. She was supported by chorus of dancers who represented the spirit of the carnival. In this solo she wore a very short black velvet suit, with a buckle of little mirrors at the belt, and with wide net rouching edged with silver, at the neck and wrists.

She was also a dancer in the wickerwood plate, the scene which won a most hearty applause from the audience. Her costume here was of sheer white crepe de chine. In another dance, the aviatix number, the costumes were snappy looking aviation suits, with a propeller on the cap. The chorus was as well drilled as in any professional show.

Marvene Wallace, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Wallace, was a beautiful silver winged fairy, who had plenty of opportunity to show skill and grace in the fairy dances. Her costume was white and shimmering with silver wings.

Jean Clifton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Clifton, was one of the "babies" in the revue. These dancers who really were nothing more than babies, were wheeled onto the stage in baby buggies, by nimble-stepping maids. Then each baby was lifted from her carriage to do an individual dance. Jean was lifted out and executed a little dance which received much applause, as did all of these baby dancers. After each dancer finished, she had to be lifted back into her carriage again. Her elaborate bow at the end of the dance, was an accomplishment by itself.

Those who attended the revue from Circleville, were Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Wallace, Ralph Wallace, Henry Taylor McCrady, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Clifton and son Jack, Mr. and Mrs. Turney Clifton, Mr. and Mrs. George Grimm, Mr. and Mrs. Loring McAbee, Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Mosely and daughter Helen, Mrs. William Clifton and son Harold, Mrs. Wilber Hoffer, Mrs. Sarah Crowe, Mrs. Mercedes Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Rinehart, Mrs. Louise Crawford, Mrs. George Fickard, Mrs. Leland Pontious, Mr. R. F. Cain, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Crowe and Miss Allison Delaphine. Mrs. Fannie Stage of Columbus was also one of the party.

guests Sunday, of her mother Mrs. Germain Joseph. Their son Der-shon and daughter Caroline remained for a longer visit.

Mrs. Carrie Patton was the Sunday guest of her son Mr. W. A. Patton and family in Columbus.

Glenn Vanscoy is home for the summer from St. Xavier college in Cincinnati.

text, the charge of David to his son, Solomon, who was to succeed him in the kingdom. The sermon was "A Heritage and a Task." Lindbergh, both in his outstanding adventure and his outstanding character was used as a type of youth of today. He told the class, that for them the world was beginning. He said also that some things are old-fashioned but that truths never change. He told the students that experience had taught everyone to fear God and keep his commandments; that the farther a man gets away from God, the farther he gets from the true vision of life.

He reminded the pupils of their wonderful heritage—their splendid schools, wonderfully equipped, and the well trained corps of high school teachers. He said it was a marvelously rich storehouse that had been played into their hands. Among many other beautiful thoughts the speaker gave, was that of the present need for upright manhood, and true womanhood. He said he admired the frankness of the young people, but abhorred the familiarity. His advice to both the boys and the girls, will be remembered always. Some of it was offered with good humor, but most of it was spoken with a deep realization of the life before the graduates.

Some of them will always remember one thing in the sermon, others will remember some other part.

Mr. Toensmeier, in his sermon, wanted the pupils to help make a better world—it is up to them to do something about it. Reference was made to the youth conventions, held since the war, their attitude on war, and on religion as a practical life.

The speaker's most splendid charge to the class follows: "Class of 1928 of the Circleville high school—

I imagine that you feel as if I were giving you an impossible task. 'Nothing is impossible,' said Jesus. 'To him that believeth.' I could have spoken smooth words, could have told you how to be successful but a larger world has come upon us overnight. We dare no longer think of our lives in terms of ourselves. That would be cowardly. That would be selfish. As you go out from your school I would not have you imagine that you are big enough to turn this world that has been overturned, right side up. No one man is big enough for that but I would have you link your lives with God, whose power is infinite. I would have you follow the leadership of Jesus Christ, who does not promise you an easy life or wealth or success, but service and sacrifice and a cross and then a victor's crown. You can play your part as heroes in the strife. You can honestly do your bit. Your education is given you, not merely to make a living, that is needed, but it is given you as a trust to use for larger ends.

"Solomon built the temple with the gold and silver an accumulated material David placed in his hands. But he made a failure of his life. He failed as king. He thought only of himself. The people existed for him and not he for the people. There are those who say—the world owes me a living. The world owes no man anything but a chance and then a fight."

A four-times offender in Michigan must go to prison for life for having a pint of gin. But if it is real gin maybe he thinks it is worth it.—Springfield (Ohio) Sun.

What is home without a can opener or a bottle cap?—Florida Times-Union.

it judges the man by what he does with his chance. I hope you will add lustre to your school but more, I hope and pray that your names will be written in the Lamb's Book of Life."

"He who, believing, strongly lays his hand

Unto the work that waits for him to do—

Though men should cavil, measures prove untrue,

Friends write their trusted promises on sand,

And failure mock him with its threatening brand,

Still, in the end, he fearless, shall pursue

Till crack of doom, will find a power which few

Or none with cause less righteous may command.

For conquest is not built on the defeat

Of any man whose aim is human good;

Who fights for justice hath already won,

Before no show of loss shall be retreat;

However, crossed, maligned, misunderstood,

He knows but triumph in the work well done."

"Arise and be doing, and the Lord be with you."

Canada's optimistic outlook is undimmed, says the Canadian Pacific Railroad. Of course it is. Is not the migration from Volsteadia about to begin?—Boston Transcript.
